IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA

Civil Action No. 16096

JOHN PAVLOVSCAK, Plaintiff

v.

JOHN L. LEWIS, CHARLES A. OWEN, and JOSEPHINE ROCHE, as Trustees of the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund, Defendants

Opinion

JOHN W. McILVAINE, District Judge

The plaintiff filed this action to enforce payments of an alleged pension due him from defendants. Service was made by delivering a copy of the complaint to W. Phillips Palmer, Assistant Administrator and person in charge of an office located at 605 Empire Building in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The return of the United States Marshal also indicates that this was the place of business of the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund. It also appears that the plaintiff issued a writ of foreign attachment and that was served upon the United States Steel Corporation and the Pittsburgh Consolidation Coal Company. The defendants thereafter filed a motion to dismiss the complaint alleging improper service of process, lack of jurisdiction and venue, and moved to quash return of service of summons and to quash the writ of foreign attachment. This matter came on for hearing and the counsel for the plaintiff advised the Court that he was not seriously pressing the writ of foreign attachment feeling that the service on the defendants was good and that he was interested in obtaining a judgment against the defendants rather than the garnishee.

The principal ground on which the defendants rely is that service was not made in accordance with Rule 4, Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 28 U.S.C.A., or pursuant to any rule or law of the United States or the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. They further take the position that the jurisdiction and venue are lacking because this suit directly involves the administration of a trust of movables, the situs of which is located outside the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

From the facts as stipulated between the parties, it appears that the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund of 1950 (hereinafter referred to as the Fund) was created by written instrument known as National Bituminous Coal Wage Agreement of 1950, between certain bituminous coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America. The agreement creating was executed in Washington, D. C., and the fund was created on March 5, 1950. It is administered by three trustees appointed by the parties to the agreement. The trustees are: John L. Lewis, a citizen of the State of Illinois; Josephine Roche, a citizen of the State of California; and Charles A. Owen, recently deceased, was a citizen of the State of Florida. The trustees held meetings at the Fund's office in Washington, D. C. They held two emergency meetings in the State of Florida. The principal assets of the Fund are personal property. Numerous residents of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania receive pensions from the pension fund and as of June 30, 1956, over 61,000 retired miners were receiving pensions. Remittances from the operators are made to the Fund's office in Washington, D. C. There are numerous operators in Pennsylvania who make payments into this fund. Between March 5, 1950, and June 30, 1956, over $832,000,000 has been paid into the fund by the operators and over $365,000,000 has been used for the payment of pensions during that same period of time. The Fund has 441 employees for administration of the fund and there are 42 employees in two area medical locations in Pennsylvania. The Fund has filed 62 suits in this court for failure of operators to remit the royalty payments due.

It is obvious that Pennsylvania is one of the leading coal production states in the United States and necessarily large amounts of royalties are earned, owed, and regularly collected by the Fund in Pennsylvania. Auditors of the Fund come into Pennsylvania to examine and audit the books of the operators. At the time of filing this suit, the defendants maintained a listing in the Pittsburgh telephone directory under the name, United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund, Empire Building, Express 1-1860, and it was in the Empire Building where the United States Marshal served W. Phillips Palmer. The Fund frequently sends examiners into Pennsylvania to examine books of operators. It appears that after the Marshal served Mr. Palmer, notice of this suit was immediately given to officials of the Fund in Washington, D. C., by Mr. Palmer.

When monies are received in Washington, D. C., they go into a general account and then on a basis of statistical analysis the funds are allocated to the pension fund and to the administrative fund or account. The individual served, Mr. Palmer, is paid out of funds put into the administrative account which in turn comes out of the general fund and the general funds are distributed either to the pension fund or the administrative account. It also appears that no accounting of the Fund's activities has been filed in any court of the United States or in any United States Court.

With these facts in mind, we must now turn to resolving the basic question of whether the defendants' motion to dismiss is well taken or not. The plaintiff maintains that there is good service of process under the law of Pennsylvania. The defendant, on the other hand, says that it is a trust and only a trust and that it can only be amenable to the laws of the District of Columbia. Though it calls itself a trust, we are not convinced that it is a trust in the strict sense of that word. It does rely on some cases in other jurisdictions that would so indicate. See Van Horn v. Lewis, D. C. 1948; 79 F. Supp. 541, 545; Cf. Hobbs v. Lewis, D. C. 1958, 159 F. Supp. 282. But the courts of Pennsylvania have recently held that this so-called trust is not a trust in the normal sense, but is rather an unincorporated association. They were aware of the decisions holding that jurisdiction in cases such as this rested solely in the District of Columbia. They as we are were impressed by the thought that the convenience of thousands of miners throughout the land should be considered. The decision of this Court was withheld pending the Pennsylvania Court's decision. The parties to this proceeding were in agreement that the Pennsylvania decision would have great weight with this Court. The Superior Court of Pennsylvania made its decision in Stampolis v. Lewis, 1958, 186 Pa. Super. 285, 142 A. 2d 348. Allocatur was refused by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania on August 19, 1958. Mr. Justice Stewart in a recent opinion in the United States Court of Appeals for the Sixth Circuit before his elevation to the Supreme Court lends support to this thinking when he indicated that while this fund is in some respects similar to charitable trusts, it is not a true charitable trust. Lewis v. Benedict Coal Corp., 6 Cir., 1958, 259 F. 2d 346, 355.

This Court not only feels that the views expressed by the Superior Court in the Stampolis case are controlling on this Court as interpreting the law of Pennsylvania, but we feel that it is a sound decision. In that case, it is obvious that the Superior Court rejected the defendants' argument that they are a trust and found that the defendants are an unincorporated association under the Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure. An association means an unincorporated association conducting any business or any activity of any nature whether for profit or otherwise under a common name. Pa. R. Civ. P. 2151, 12 P.S. Appendix. It is obvious that this Fund was engaging in business—that of collecting royalties from operators and paying them out to miners eligible for them. It was operating under the name of the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund. It carried out many activities in Pennsylvania: Among others, it brought numerous suits in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania; it sent its employees into Pennsylvania to examine books of those against whom it had claims; it maintained a listing in the Pittsburgh telephone directory; and it collected large sums of money from Pennsylvania.

Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 2156, provides that: ". . . an action against an association may be brought in and only in a county where the association regularly conducts business or any association activity . . .". It certainly appears that many activities of the association were carried on in Allegheny County such as maintaining a listing in the telephone directory; and the primary concern to the Fund, the collection of monies and the examination of the books of operators. The process herein was served in accordance with Pennsylvania Rule of Civil Procedure 2157 for it was served on the person in charge of the place where the association carried on activities; that is, it was served at the office where it was listed in the Pittsburgh telephone directory.

It is also possible that this Fund could be an entity similar to a corporation within the meaning of Rule 2176 of the Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure.

> " 'corporation or similar entity' includes any public, quasi-public or private corporation, insurance association or exchange, registered partnership, partnership association limited, joint stock company or association, 'Massachusetts trust', or any other association which is regarded as an entity distinct from the members composing the association. . . ."

See Rule 2176.

It is interesting that a note to this Rule indicates that the phrase "corporation or similar entity" includes all associations and business entities which are regarded as separate and distinct from their members, and there was no attempt to enumerate all the various classes of private corporations falling within the definition.

If the Fund is an entity similar to a corporation, service is proper if it is on a person for the time being in charge of any office of the entity. It was argued whether this was an office of the entity, but in any event service is permitted on an entity by sending the copy of the complaint by registered mail direct to the Secretary of the Commonwealth and to the entity at its principal place of business as the Court might direct. See Pennsylvania Rule of Civil Procedure 2180. Here it is obvious that the defendant received speedy notice and that, of course, is the main intention of Rule 2180.

The situation here is somewhat akin to a class suit and the criterion as to service in a class suit is whether the service in question constitutes adequate notice to the class sued to come in and defend. Malarney v. Upholsterers' International Union, D.C. E.D. Pa. 1947, 7 F.R.D. 403.

Mr. Palmer, the individual served, testified that he was an employee of the medical fund, but was not authorized to accept the service in this case. However, it is interesting to note that he is paid a salary from the same fund as one of the trustees of the Fund is paid.

Dr. Warren F. Draper testified that he was the executive medical officer of the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund. This Fund, of course, is the defendant in this case. He, from time to time, visits the local offices, Pittsburgh being one of them. His primary duty is to supervise the medical work of the Fund and Mr. Palmer was the assistant to Dr. Draper for this area.

The defendants have attempted to distinguish the medical office from the pension fund, but this distinction seems more fanciful than real. The medical fund obviously operates under the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund, and was created under this Fund and has no independent existence. If this be true, then the service upon Mr. Palmer would be good service upon the Fund under normal procedures by serving a defendant in the office of the defendant where it regularly carries on business. Claycraft Co. v. United Mine Workers of America, 6 Cir., 1953, 204 F. 2d 600.

Applying the rationale of Stampolis v. Lewis, supra, we feel that under all the pertinent facts that jurisdiction and venue are not lacking in this Court, and our finding as the ultimate fact after considering all the relevant testimony is that the Fund is doing business in Pennsylvania and that this would be the result in Pennsylvania within the somewhat restrictive ruling of Lutz v. Foster & Kester Co., Inc., 1951, 367 Pa. 125 79 A. 2d 222, although this Court feels that the rule of the Lutz case might be relaxed if it were again before the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania in view of the trend of the judicial decisions throughout the nation and in the Supreme Court of the United States in recent years. See also Partin v. Michaels Art Bronze Co., 3 Cir., 202 F. 2d 541.

In addition to our thoughts that the defendants are not a trust in the normally accepted sense, we feel that they are a new creature created pursuant to the Labor-Management Relations Act of 1947, 29 U.S.C.A. § 141. They were created by federal law and should be amenable to federal law; there is no reason to resort to the old and ancient theories of trust law. The Fund is a creature of new federal legislation and we must not stifle it. The beneficiaries, the thousands of hard working miners, who have labored years under the ground in creating this Fund, must not be forced to go to Washington, D. C., but should and must be able to go to the federal court in their district in order to have their rights and claims adjudicated in a tribunal convenient to them and certainly not inconvenient to the Fund.

We repeat that this is a new type of relationship that only lately has been developed as a concept of employer-employee relationship. The Fund was created pursuant to Section 302 (c) of the Labor-Management Relations Act, 1947, 29 U.S.C.A. § 186(c). As Justice Douglas so aptly pointed out:

> "The Labor Management Relations Act expressly furnishes some substantive law. It points out what the parties may or may not do in certain situations. Other problems will lie in the penumbra of express statutory • • • sanction but will be solved by looking at the policy of the legislation and fashioning a remedy that will effectuate that policy. The range of judicial inventiveness will be determined by the nature of the problem. See Board of Commissioners of Jackson County v. United States, 308 U.S. 343, 351, 60 S. Ct. 285, 84 L. Ed. 313. Federal interpretation of the federal law will govern, not state law. Cf. Jerome v. United States, 318 U.S. 101, 104, 63 S. Ct. 483, 87 L. Ed. 640. But state law, if compatible with the purpose of § 301, may be resorted to in order to find the rule that will best effectuate the federal policy. See Board of Commissioners of Jackson County v. United States, supra, 308 U.S., at 351-352, 60 S. Ct., at pages 288-289. Any state law applied, however, will be absorbed as federal law and will not be an independent source of private rights." Textile Workers Union of America v. Lincoln Mills, 353 U.S. 448, 457, 77 S. Ct. 912, 918, 1 L. Ed. 2d 972.

Accordingly, defendants' motions to dismiss and to quash service should be denied.

JOHN A. PAVLOVSCAK, Appellee

APPEAL FROM THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE WESTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA

Argued June 4, 1959

Before: GOODRICH, KALODNER and HASTIE, Circuit Judges.

Opinion of the Court

(Filed September 18, 1959)

HASTIE, Circuit Judge.

In this case a retired coal miner seeks to establish his right to a pension to be paid by the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund, as established by an agreement between certain coal operators and the United Mine Workers under sanction of Section 302 of the Labor-Management Relations Act of 1947. 61 STAT. 157, 29 U.S.C.A. § 186 (c). To this end he has sued "John L. Lewis, Henry G. Schmidt and Josephine Roche, as Trustees of the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund" in the District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania, the district within which the plaintiff resides. Diversity of citizenship is asserted as the basis of federal jurisdiction.[1]

The United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund, hereinafter called the Fund, has been created and functions to provide medical and pension benefits for retired miners. It is administered in the District of Columbia pursuant to the constituting indenture by the

[1] Although no party has raised any question concerning the existence of the requisite diversity of citizenship here, it seems appropriate to point out that this case is different from Underwood v. Maloney, 3d Cir. 1958, 256 F.2d 334. There an individual brought suit claiming to represent the members of a labor union, an unincorporated association; as a class. We ruled that to establish diversity jurisdiction plaintiff must show that all members of the union were citizens of states other than those in which opposing parties resided.

Nothing like that appears here. The suit is against an organization created for special and defined purposes by an indenture executed by the United Mine Workers and certain coal operators. That organization is a body of three "trustees" vested with full authority and responsibility for carrying out the terms of the indenture. Pennsylvania treats this body of three as an unincorporated association for procedural purposes. Whether we would so characterize the group we accept for the purposes of this case the Pennsylvania conception.

Further distinguishing the Underwood case, the union members here do not pay into the Fund or control its administration. The individual union member may or may not, according to future circumstances, become legally entitled to benefits from the Fund. The trustees are not agents of the union or of the operators, since they are not responsible to these persons or required to do their bidding. They function independently with the indenture serving as their charter and defining their responsibilities. Indeed, the essence of the scheme seems to have been to set up a body in fact and in law separate and distinct from both the union and the mining companies. Thus, if the residence of the trustees satisfies diversity requirements it seems immaterial where the coal operators or the members of the union which established the Fund reside.

Trustees named in this case. Sums are paid into the Fund periodically by mine operators. The Trustees cause pensions and other benefits to be provided for miners found to be eligible. The Trustees are citizens of states other than Pennsylvania and, as individuals, have not been found within Pennsylvania. The corpus of the Fund consists of movables with situs in the District of Columbia.

Service of process was upon an alleged agent of the Fund in charge of an office maintained in the name of the Fund in Pittsburgh. A motion to dismiss the complaint has raised the question of the suability of the Fund in the Western District of Pennsylvania as well as the sufficiency of process. The district court denied the motion, Pavlorszeak v. Lewis, D.C. 1958, 168 F. Supp. 839. At the same time, it sanctioned this interlocutory appeal, which has been perfected as provided by Section 1292 (b) of Title 28, United States Code, as amended by the Act of September 2, 1958, 72 STAT. 1770.

What the plaintiff is attempting here is to have jurisdiction exercised over the Fund as a business organization in the nature of an unincorporated association. Under Rule 17 (b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 28 U.S.C.A., the district court was obligated to determine the capacity of the Fund to be sued as a constituted business organization by applying the law of the state in which the district court sat. In this endeavor the district court turned to Stampolis v. Lewis, 1958, 186 Pa. Super. 285, 142 A. 2d 348, allocatur refused, Pennsylvania Supreme Court, August 19, 1958, certiorari denied 1959, 359 U.S. 907, 79 S. Ct. 582, 3 L. Ed. 2d 572, and found that there the Superior Court of Pennsylvania had considered the status of this very Fund as a party litigant and had treated it as a business unit suable in the same manner as an unincorporated association under Pennsylvania law. True that case involved a writ of foreign attachment, while this one is an attempted exercise of ordinary jurisdiction over the organization directly, but for present purposes the important thing is that the Stampolis decision is an authoritative Pennsylvania ruling that Pennsylvania procedural law treats this Fund, for purposes of suability and amenability to process, like an ordinary unincorporated association. It may be, as has been argued to us, that for certain purposes of substantive law the Fund will be treated as a trust, or perhaps as something else, but for present purposes that is irrelevant. We are narrowly concerned with Pennsylvania procedure for handling suits against organized groups conducting business activity in that state.

The Stampolis case goes further. It treats the actual contacts of the Fund with Pennsylvania, which are also before us now, as sufficient to bring it within the reach of the local courts. Here again the Pennsylvania view of Pennsylvania law is conclusive, unless the relationship of the Fund to the state is so slight and inconsequential that its subjection to the jurisdiction of local courts offends due process of law.

The due process question need not detain us long. The facts stipulated or otherwise in evidence without dispute show substantial activity of the Fund in Pennsylvania and substantial direct impact of its activities upon the local community. Mine operators in Pennsylvania continue to pay money into the Fund while many retired miners in Pennsylvania receive substantial benefits from it. In this connection, employees of the Fund from time to time inspect books and records of operators in Pennsylvania in determining the extent of obligations to the Fund. In addition, the Trustees on behalf of the Fund have filed more than sixty suits in the Western District of Pennsylvania against coal operators for alleged failure to make payments owed to the Fund.

The Fund maintains in its own name two area medical offices in Pennsylvania for the administration of its responsibility to provide medical benefits to miners in the area. Some forty-two persons, about ten per cent of the entire staff of the Fund, are employed in these Pennsylvania offices. In this case service of process was upon the officer in charge of the Pittsburgh area medical office.

The Supreme Court has accepted much less substantial local activity than we have here in furtherance of an out-of-state enterprise as sufficient to make it reasonable for the state to subject the entrepreneur to the jurisdiction of its courts. McGee v. International Life Ins. Co., 1957, 355 U.S. 220, 78 S. Ct. 199, 2 L. Ed. 2d. 223; International Shoe Co. v. State of Washington, 1945, 326 U.S. 310, 66 S. Ct. 154, 90 L. Ed. 95. Accordingly, we find no constitutional objection to the position taken by Pennsylvania that this Fund may be sued in Pennsylvania as an unincorporated association doing business in that state.

Finally, the District Court inquired whether service on the officer in charge of the Pittsburgh office satisfied the procedural requirements of Rule 2156 and Rule 2157 of the Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure, 12 P.S. Appendix. This inquiry was appropriate since Rule 4 (d) (7) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure authorizes service of summons and complaint "in the manner prescribed by the law of the state in which the service is made." On this point the court below said:

> "Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure, Rule 2156 provides that: '. . . an action against an association may be brought in and only in a county where the association regularly conducts business or any association activity . . .'. It certainly appears that many activities of the association were carried on in Allegheny County such as maintaining a listing in the telephone directory; and the primary concern to the Fund, the collection of monies and the examination of the books of operators. The process herein was served in accordance with Pennsylvania Rule of Civil Procedure 2157 for it was served on the person in charge of the place where the association carried on activities: . . .". 168 F. Supp. at page 842.

In the light of what we already have said about the activities of the Fund, and particularly the operation of its area medical offices, in Pennsylvania and in the Pittsburgh area we are satisfied that the conclusion of the court below was correct. Cf. Clagcraft Co. v. United Mine Workers of America, 6 Cir., 1953, 204 F.2d 600. In this connection it is worth mentioning that, when process was served in this case on August 9, 1957, Pennsylvania law recognized rather slight activity within the state as sufficient to constitute "doing business" for purposes of the law regulating service of process. Florio v. Powder-Power Tool Corp., 3 Cir., 1957, 248 F.2d 367. The subsequent reinstatement of the more restrictive "solicitation plus" doctrine under Act No. 370 of July 11, 1957, P.L. 711, § 1, 15 P.S. § 2852-2 et seq., did not become effective until September 1, 1957, too late to affect this case. Actually, we think the business activity of the Fund within Pennsylvania was sufficient to satisfy the concept of doing business under the present Pennsylvania law. Certainly, it was much more than enough under the law in force during August 1957 as we interpreted it in the Florio case.

For these reasons the interlocutory order from which this appeal has been taken will be affirmed.

Opinion of the Court

(Filed February 10, 1960)

PER CURIAM:

Our decision on this appeal turned upon Pennsylvania law as announced in Stampolis v. Lewis, 1958, 186 Pa. Super. 285, 142 A.2d 348. Now we are able to reexamine our original opinion in the new light which the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has cast upon the Stampolis ruling in Mykalyk v. Lewis, No. 149, March Term, 1959, — A. 2d —, decided on January 18, 1960.

More particularly, our conclusion that the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund was suable in Pennsylvania and that proper procedure had been followed in serving process depended upon Pennsylvania law as announced in the Stampolis case. Now, in the Myhalyk case, with this very Fund before it the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has considered the Stampolis decision and has approved the Stampolis result, but has given it an authoritative new rationale. Specifically, while Stampolis indicated that the Trustees of the United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund were suable in Pennsylvania as an unincorporated association, the Myhalyk case has now established that this enterprise is suable in Pennsylvania, but as a "foreign corporation or similar entity" under Rule 2176, Pennsylvania Rules of Civil Procedure, 12 P.S. Appendix, p. 482. In addition, Rules 2179 and 2180 provide a procedure for the service of process upon such an entity in a county where it regularly conducts business by personally serving the pleading upon the "agent or person for the time being in charge of, * * * any office or usual place of business of the corporation or similar entity". As our original opinion indicates, this procedure was followed here. It is valid under Rule 4 (d)(7) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, 28 U.S.C.A. Actually, there is no essential difference between the procedure prescribed by Pennsylvania Rules 2156 and 2157 for serving a foreign unincorporated association and the procedure prescribed by Rules 2156 and 2157 for serving a foreign "corporation or similar entity". Thus, for present purposes it makes no difference that in approving the Stampolis result the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has modified the Stampolis doctrine with respect to the proper legal characterization of United Mine Workers of America Welfare and Retirement Fund.

The petition for rehearing will be denied.
